THE MYTHOLOGICAL ARTEFACTS AND CURIOS DEPARTMENT
HORATIO BARTHOLOMEW-SMYTHE • CHIEF CURATOR

Dear Mr Shrub, Mrs Geoghegan, Mrs King, Miss White, Mrs Harding and the children in Reception at Littlehaven Infant School,

I am so glad you emailed me to let us know about the very rare eggs you have been looking after. What an incredible discovery you made!

We sent a team down to your school over the weekend, and fortunately we were just in time. You were absolutely right to incubate the eggs, so well done on looking after them so well. I'm sure you know all about how to stay healthy and all of the things that animals, or dinosaurs in this case, need to survive.

We have had to take the dinosaur babies to a secure location, for obvious reasons. Imagine if we'd left them to roam around your school. They grow very big and drop the most enormous poo poos. You would not want one of those in your early years' area!

We will take extra good care of the baby dinosaurs. If you would like to know more about them, just send us a letter or two and we will be pleased to reply. We videoed them before we left so you can see. You may notice that there were twins!!

Yours sincerely,

Dr. Horatio Bartholomew-Smythe, Bsc, Msc, PHD, MBE, OBE Chief curator of the Department of mythological objects at the Natural History Museum
